

BUILDER'S BLUNDER FATAL TO THREE.

Collapse of a Buffalo Building in Course of Repairs.

Removal of Part of the Foundation Causes the Accident.

Falling Debris Buries Scores of Office Occupants, but All Save Three Are Rescued.

CONTRACTOR'S BODY IN THE RUINS.

One of the Victims is a Girl Cashier, Who Is Caught Within Her Wire Railing and Cannot Flee in Time.

Buffalo, N. Y., May 21.—A section of the Seneca street front of Brown's building collapsed at 9:25 o'clock this morning, burying a score of people in the ruins. The dead are:

George Metz, a barber.
Jeanie Griffith, cashier in a barber shop.
William P. Straub, a contractor, is known to be in the ruins.

Those at the hospital are: Jacob Langdon, barber, scalp torn and body contused; William Alexander, steam fitter, scalp wounds and body bruised; Jacob Hickman, barber, injured about head and body; S. L. Haywe, carpenter, skull fractured, may die; James Adams, mason, scalp wounds and injured hip; Michael O'Brien, carpenter, wrenched back and scalp wounds; Joseph Bullard, plasterer, injured internally; Edward Murphy, plasterer, right arm injured; Fritz Forman, laborer, badly bruised.

A CITY LANDMARK.

Brown's building was one of the city's landmarks. It stood on the corner of Main and Seneca streets, and for years the Western Union Telegraph Company had occupied the ground floor corner as a business office and all of the fourth floor as an operating room.

The building was filled with offices, and on the ground floor were stores occupied by merchants. The Western Union left the building a few weeks ago, and the owners of the block began the work of remodeling and strengthening it. On the Seneca street side workmen were engaged in putting in place new columns and beams and new foundations for the same.

Nos. 8 and 10 Seneca street were unoccupied, the principal alterations being made at that point. No. 12 was occupied as a barber shop by George Seibert, and No. 14 by James Clogg's jewelry store and Thomas Jones's news stand. The offices on the floors above were nearly all tenanted, and altogether there were probably fifty people in the collapsed section.

GIRL CASHIER PERISHES.

In Seibert's barber shop were nine barbers, the girl cashier and several customers. When the crash occurred all made a dash for the front door, but the falling bricks drove them to the rear, where an alley leads to Washington street. Those in front rushed into the alley, only to be met by the falling rear walls, under which Metz was buried and killed. The others crouched in a corner of the shop until the avalanche ceased, when they made their way out. The cashier had her desk in the front of the shop behind a wire cage. She was unable to get out of it in time to join the others and perished beneath the fallen wall.

In Nos. 8 and 10 were probably twenty workmen, including steamfitters, ironworkers, carpenters and plasterers, and it was here that the crash was greatest. Nearly all of the men were caught in the falling walls and floors, and buried in the ruins. The tenants on the upper floors had many narrow escapes, but so far as known, all of them succeeded in making their escape. At 10 o'clock the rescuers removed a heavy timber and Robert Cassler, eighteen years of age, brother of the contracting steam fitter, crawled out unharmed.

Half an hour later, the wreckers uncovered the foot of one man and then the arms of another. The faces of both were completely hidden by the great piles of brick, mortar and timber that lay heaped upon them. They were Edward Murphy and Joseph Bullard. They were dug out just before noon. When all the victims who could be seen or heard were rescued, the search for the missing began, and the ruins were worked over in the hope of finding the bodies of Contractor Straub and Jeanie Griffith, who were known to be somewhere among the mass of wreckage.

CONTRACTOR STILL MISSING.

Straub was seen in the doorway of No. 10 just before the collapse, and the search for him was pursued in that vicinity, while that for the girl cashier was confined to the ruins of the barber shop. Shortly before 6 o'clock the body of Miss Griffith was found. Straub's body has not yet been found.

The Commissioners of Public Works will make a thorough investigation of the accident. A permit was issued for the alterations on April 2, with the warning that the utmost care must be used, as the building was such an old structure. It was owned by Brown Bros. & Co., the New York bankers. A determined effort will be made to fix the responsibility for the disaster, which is said to be due to criminal negligence.

Early this morning the workmen knocked out the supports in the cellar, thus practically removing the foundation of the building. The entire weight of the front wall rested on a single iron pillar, the bottom of which rested on the sidewalk. The sidewalk was supported by small pillars unable to withstand great weight. When the wall supports in the basement were knocked away, the weight of the front was thrown on to the single pillar in the center. The sidewalk fell beneath its weight, and the crash followed without an instant's warning.

One of the results of the accident will probably be that the entire block will be condemned and ordered torn down. The walls of the structure still standing are bulged to an extent which makes another collapse not improbable.

Dark Days for Peru.

Panama, May 13.—Under the caption of "Dark Days for Peru," the Panama Star and Herald says: "Very soon Peru will be in the throes of a revolution. It has been brewing for some time. Some one was wanted to take the lead, and today we hear from Buenos Ayres that ex-President Caceres has left Argentina for Callao, as the state of affairs in Peru demands his return."

STEAMSHIP TALISMAN IN A WONDERFUL ELECTRICAL STORM.

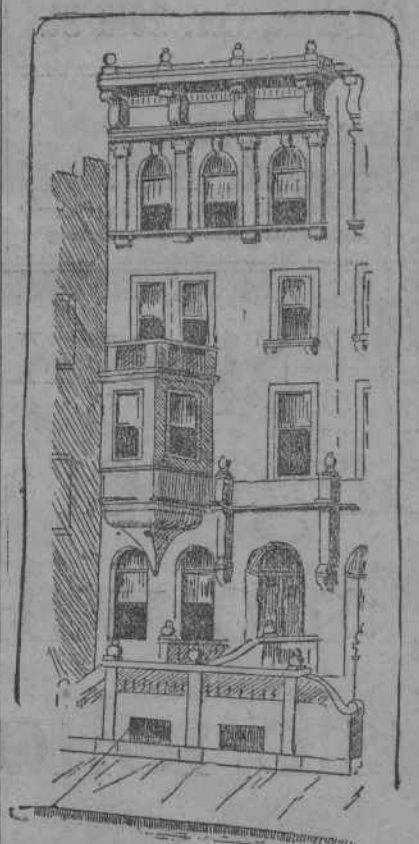

The accompanying illustration was drawn from a description given by members of the ship's crew of the terrible yet magnificent display they witnessed last Monday night at sea. The ship was in a blaze of electrical illumination for a few hours, with lightning playing all about her, St. Elmo lights on her spars and stays, and the ocean a sea of fire. The mate of the vessel says it was the most marvellous elementary exhibition he ever saw.

CROKER'S HOUSE UNSAFE.

Pillars Settling and Court Orders Repairs at the ex-Tammany Leader's Expense.

Justice Trazin, in the Supreme Court, yesterday made an order directing the Superintendent of Buildings to make safe the house owned by Richard Croker, at No. 5 East Seventy-fourth street, which the department had reported to be in a dangerous condition.

The mansion is a four-story brownstone

MR. CROKER'S HOUSE IN DANGER.

Inspectors of the Building Department found two pillars supporting a portion of the ex-Tammany chief's mansion at No. 5 East Seventy-fourth street, giving way. An order of court was secured to restore the foundations and Mr. Croker will have to foot the bill on his return from Europe. He bought the house for his own use, but rented it and is a combination of both the Renaissance and Spanish styles of architecture. It has a frontage of twenty-five feet and extends back fifty-eight feet. The house was originally intended for Mr. Croker's own use, but he changed his mind and rented it. The Building Department objected to the weakness of a couple of pillars supporting a portion of the house. The inspectors said the pillars did not rest on a solid foundation and were settling. As a consequence the walls were cracking and rendered the building unsafe.

The order directs the department to make the pillars safe by rebuilding them on a solid foundation, and also authorizes the department to tear down the wall and rebuild it at Mr. Croker's expense.

RACED AWHEEL AFTER A MAN.

Bicycle Policeman's Nerve Capture of a Drunken Driver.

Bicycle Policeman Schuessler on Wednesday evening was standing by his wheel at Sixty-second street and Western Boulevard when John Gaffney, a hack driver, under the influence of liquor, came along, lashing his horse to a run. The officer called to Gaffney to slow up. He only lashed his horse the harder. Schuessler jumped upon his wheel, and raced after him. At Fifty-ninth street he seized the horse's bit. The officer's wheel, which was under the horse, was thrown off its axle, and the horse, and inside of half a block stopped him.

The sudden halt sent Gaffney sprawling on his box. He fell upon the officer's shoulders. Gaffney was fined $10 by Magistrate Cornell yesterday.

MISS TRAUTMAN IS BETTER.

Elizabeth's Hiccoughing Girl Resists Hypnotism and Improves.

Miss Nettie Trautman, the young woman of Elizabeth, N. J., who for three weeks has been affected with hiccoughs, was slightly improved yesterday. Dr. Eastlake, of New York, yesterday telegraphed to a cure for the malady, but the young woman could not be placed under hypnotic influence.

EERIE NIGHT ABOARD SHIP.

Wonderful Electric Storm Through Which the Steamer Talisman Safely Passed.

For three hours last Monday the Norwegian steamer Talisman, Captain Berg, which sailed from Demarara on May 1 for this port, struggled in a terrific electrical storm off Penikese Island. She was headed due North when threatening clouds were discovered dead ahead.

This was about 7:30 o'clock in the evening, and in half an hour a heavy breeze had sprung up. The Talisman held her course and a few minutes after 8 o'clock the storm burst. The steamer rolled and pitched, but her head was kept dead ahead. Rain fell in sheets and dash after dash of lightning kept the boiling sea brilliantly illuminated. St. Elmo's lights glowed on every stay on the vessel and giant waves crashed against her staunch sides and fell in sheets over the upper decks and cabins.

This continued for about two hours when the electrical display almost ceased, and the ship fell to about forty miles an hour. For half an hour everything was comparatively quiet and it was hoped that the worst of the storm had passed.

At 10:30, however, the storm burst again with renewed fury, and the wind reached 82 miles an hour. This time it was accompanied by hail, which rained on the deck, creating a fearful din, and the sea became as high as day from the continuous lightning flashes. One of the mates said the ship seemed to be fairly alive with electricity. Then the storm died away suddenly, and the vessel was unharmed.

BERNHARDT AS CESARINE.

First Appearance Here of the Great Actress as the Heroine of Dumas's Play.

It was a long-promised treat, but it came last night, and was nevertheless welcome. Sarah Bernhardt has given New Yorkers her version of "La Femme de Claude," the fame of which has been heralded from abroad for years. Mme. Duse and Minnie Maddern Fiske have been seen here in Italian and English versions respectively, but still the desire to see Mme. Bernhardt as Cesarine has been ever predominant.

The actress's production was in the nature of a farewell gift. True, Mme. Bernhardt will appear to-night in a triple bill by way of leave taking, but they are all familiar roles. The memory of Bernhardt's Cesarine will outlive her other impersonations, because it is new, so far as she is concerned. In the same sense, the production of that perfection of naturalness, Mme. Bernhardt, illustrated the highest degree of dramatic art. The interview with Cesarine in the first act was an apt illustration of that fact. She began by mocking him, then passively listening to his proposals and finally rage, fear and chagrin were rapidly expressed by look and gesture as he calmly informed her of his knowledge of her guilty secret.

The love scene with Antonin was another perfect bit of realism. Step by step she shared the infatuated youth until he promised to give up the cherished papers containing the secret of her husband's invention. Anybody who could resist the passionate pleading of the siren wife would have to blame her for her own undoing.

M. Deval again distinguished himself in the character of Claude. He was the ideal injured husband, as one would fancy Alexander Dumas had pictured him when writing his famous play. M. Deval's Antonin was earnest, but not very impressive. It is a pity that M. Deval's Cesarine was an energetic and forcible antagonist. His subtle manner in getting the upper hand of the wicked Cesarine was masterly.

Mlle. Segur made a pretty and pleasant Rebecca and furnished nearly all of the comedy work of the drama. Cesarine is not a popular character. A woman who is thoroughly bad, false to her husband, induces an infatuated youth to betray his patron and shows in every move the instincts of total depravity, can hardly hope to awaken sympathy, even when she shot by her husband. With Sarah in the part, one loses sight of her from when the witchery of the woman, and New Yorkers should be thankful that she has shown that a woman can be a villainess and yet, despite the incongruity of her attributes.

SAGE SURE OF M'KINLEY.

He Knows He Is for Gold, and, by Their Buttons, Other Brokers Indorse the Ohion.

Russell Sage said yesterday he was in favor of McKinley for the Presidency, and stated he believed the Ohion was as sound on the money question as himself. No one can doubt where Sage stands on the question of gold. Some friends of Mr. Sage asked him how he knew that McKinley was in favor of sound money. To this Sage replied by saying that he had gone to the trouble of investigating the matter, and had satisfied himself through excellent authority that McKinley is in favor of gold.

Some of the brokers in Wall street expressed their opinion of McKinley yesterday, in a joke. According to the tale which was told on the Stock Exchange, McKinley entered a dentist's establishment at Canton, O., the other day, for the purpose of having two teeth filled. The dentist, after an examination of the cavities, asked:

"Do you want them filled with gold or silver?"

Remembering the reputation of the syndicate that he was in, the McKinley mouth closed, and he meekly replied:

"Fill one with gold and the other with silver."

There was a brave display of campaign buttons by the brokers yesterday, the McKinley buttons outnumbering all the others. The Red buttons were next in popularity, with the photograph of Morton in the minority. There was only one Democratic button on the floor, and that was a Cleveland button. It was worn by H. H. Hart.

MME. SCHUMANN IS DEAD.

She Was a Noted Musician and Widow of the Great Composer.

Frankfort-on-Main, May 21.—Mme. Clara Schumann, the famous musician, died here yesterday.

Mme. Schumann was born September 13, 1819, at Leipzig. She was taught by her father, Friedrich Wieck, and began to play in public at ten years of age. At twelve she appeared at one of the famous Gewandhaus concerts at Leipzig.

In 1840 she was married to the great composer, Robert Schumann. On the death of her husband, in 1856, she removed with her children to Berlin, and has since resided at Wiesbaden and Frankfurt-on-Main.

Lost with All on Board.

Victoria, B. C., May 21.—All doubts as to the fate of the missing schooner May Belle, which left here in January for the sealing grounds, have been set at rest. Conclusive proofs that she was lost at sea have been brought here by Captain McKinley, of the schooner Penelope, who found parts of the vessel which had been washed ashore at Victoria. The May Belle had on board twenty-seven persons.

Going to Study Seal Fishing.

London, May 21.—According to Mr. Carson, Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, two professors of natural history will, with the co-operation of Canada and the United States, shortly go to Bering Sea, there to study the details of the fur-sealing industry.

NO LONGER LONELY IS WARNER MILLER.

Seem to Be Others Willing to Sit with Him Outside the Breastworks.

Senator Coggshell Comes to Town with Glowing Accounts of Anti-Platt Sentiment.

EX-JUDGE ROBERTSON'S POSITION.

Vice-Presidential Booms on the McKinley Ticket Said to Be Ready to Launch for Cornelius N. Bliss and General Horace Porter.

Corroborative of the information contained in the Journal recently that the Republican leaders throughout the State are deserting Mr. Platt and coming out for McKinley, is the news of Senator Henry J. Coggshell's position. He reached the city last night fresh from conferences with Onondaga County leaders. He supports Warner Miller in his attack on Platt because of the latter's denunciation of McKinley.

"The people," said he, "are not in sympathy with, nor do they approve of, the vindictive assaults that have been made against Major McKinley. To assail a prominent candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination is bad taste and worse politics. This is particularly so because of the probability of that candidate's nomination at St. Louis next month."

"Spiteful attacks, such as have been made," continued the Senator, "place the men who make them in an embarrassing position. These traders will have to do one of two things, either oppose him after he is nominated, which will avoid them nothing and cannot defeat him at the polls, or retract the charges made against him and acknowledge that they were made either in bad faith or through gross ignorance."

THE MAJOR WILL STAND BY HIS PARTY. Mr. Coggshell thinks McKinley's position on the currency question is as good as that of any other candidate for the Presidency.

"Major McKinley will stand on the platform adopted at St. Louis if he is nominated, and will carry out the party's policy thus declared. On June 23, 1896, McKinley declared himself in favor of sound money and the use of silver in sufficient quantities to meet the business wants of the country. He was a gubernatorial candidate in Ohio in 1893, and when his opponent, Mr. Campbell, asked him if he was in favor of free coinage of silver he said he was unequivocally for the best money that the ingenuity of man has devised."

INDORSER WARNER MILLER'S LETTER. "What do I think of Warner Miller's letter?" repeated Mr. Coggshell. "I think he voices the sentiments of the people of the State. I think McKinley is the first, and the second, choice of a majority of the Republicans. I say this with all due respect to Governor Morton and his candidacy. One difficulty that Governor Morton has had to contend with is the fact that his canvass has been managed, or rather, mismanaged, by an individual in whom the people have no confidence. Everywhere I go the sentiment is strongly for McKinley."

National Committeeman W. M. Hahn, of Ohio, before leaving for his home yesterday had a long talk with General Horace Porter, whose name has been frequently mentioned in connection with the Vice-Presidency. The two gentlemen were in conference for over an hour. When General Porter was asked if the talk had any bearing on the nomination for the Vice-Presidency, he smiled and declared he was not a candidate.

Another Vice-Presidential boom was launched yesterday by some of the McKinley boomers. This was in the interest of Cornelius N. Bliss, who is the Chairman of the Republican National Committee. Mr. Bliss is a prominent member of the McKinley League, and is one of the men who favor the organization of a Provisional Committee in this State should McKinley be the nominee of the St. Louis Convention.

MR. LAUTERBACH'S VIEWS.

Chairman Edward Lauterbach, of the Republican County Committee, and one of the delegates-at-large to the National Convention, last night issued a typewritten manifesto, in the course of which he said:

"I state, as I have frequently stated before, and as I now reiterate, that the question of paramount interest to be decided by the political conventions in the adoption of platforms and in the selection of candidates is the financial question, and that the clearer the enunciation in favor of a gold standard, against the silver heresy and against any proposition for the establishment of an arbitrary ratio between gold and silver, is made by the Republican National Convention, and the clearer the record which its nominee will present in this respect, the greater will be the certainty of Republican success."

"As the money question is even more vital than that of protection, and as doubt

HAS ROBERTSON JOINED MILLER.

A matter that caused many of the Platt men considerable uneasiness during the day was the announcement that ex-Judge William H. Robertson, who will be one of the delegates from the Sixteenth Congressional District, had declared that his views were in strict accord with those of Warner Miller, and that he believed all fair-minded Republicans would support McKinley in the St. Louis Convention.

Their Adventures Cut Short.

Three boys, fourteen and fifteen years old, giving their names as James Ryan, of No. 50 Amsterdam avenue, John Devlin, of No. 24 West Sixty-second street, and James Reilly, of No. 107 Amsterdam avenue, were arrested at North Tarrytown yesterday, and locked up on the charge of being suspicious persons. They were on their way to the West in search of adventure and wealth, but a hard-hearted train crew put them off the car on which they were stealing a ride.

WEDS THE HOSIERY GIRL.

Student Verga, of Rutgers College, Marries Miss Thompson Without His Rich Father's Consent.

John Stanley Verga, son of a wealthy Camden (N. J.) manufacturer, fell in love with Miss Nellie Thompson, daughter of a New Brunswick painter, when he was a freshman at Rutgers College. They met at a public ball one night about two years ago. Nellie in figure, well formed and with a pretty face, Nellie Thompson had many admirers, but after she met Verga she had eyes for no one else.

The papers of New Brunswick yesterday contained a notice of the marriage of the young couple in New York by the Rev. Thomas Ewen. No date was given, but Mr. Verga acknowledged to a reporter that the wedding took place a few weeks ago. He had taken Nellie on a trip to New York, and they concluded that they might as well get married then as any other time, although the parents of neither had been consulted.

Yesterday Mr. Verga went to Camden to tell his parents the news. They were not particularly delighted, for the reason that their boy was not through college and not prepared to support a wife. Mr. Verga said a good many harsh things at first, then told John that he must leave college and go to work to make a home for his wife.

Verga is back at college now. He is in the junior class and will finish the term. He is not living with his wife. She is employed in the Norfolk and New Brunswick hosiery.
